People’s Passion Nurtured by Leadership

Some visits are meant for exploration, while others illuminate their significance. When His Highness Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Vice President, Prime Minister, and Ruler of Dubai, may God protect him, attends the Abu Dhabi International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition (ADIHEX), the scene conveys a profound meaning even before its details unfold. This heritage, cherished across generations and embodied in falcons, horses, crafts, the fragrance of the desert, and the recollections of the sea, holds a vital place in the consciousness and vision of the UAE’s leadership. It serves as a cornerstone of the nation’s identity and an enduring hallmark of its character.

This visit underscores the leadership’s unwavering presence and ongoing support for the exhibition, reaffirming a principle that the UAE has cultivated over decades: that heritage is not only a passion of its people but also a duty of the state. This commitment may be what enables heritage to endure and rejuvenate, preserving its significance in the lives of generations whose tools may evolve, yet whose roots remain firmly intact.

During the first three days, family attendance was a highlight of the exhibition, with many families visiting before the new school year begins. The pavilions and activities offered a blend of entertainment and education, enabling families to spend time together while discovering Emirati heritage. Interactive experiences brought this heritage to life for younger generations, turning the exhibition’s early days into a memorable family outing before school resumed.

At the exhibition, falcons were recognised for documenting their new numbers. This year’s auctions have intensified the competition, culminating in a record-setting fifth round on Saturday, where a purebred “Qarmousha Pure Ultra White” falcon chick was sold for the highest price ever achieved for a falcon in the region as of 2026.

Away from the auction platform, the story unfolds in every direction. The bustling arena and equestrian fields highlight a rich legacy, while Saluki dogs reflect their desert history. The evolution of hunting and camping equipment showcases a deep-rooted passion. Amid the excitement and diverse crowd, the venue unites everyone around a shared love.

The beauty of this scene lies in the closeness of the past: a child exploring a craft, a falconer sharing wisdom, a rider in the arena, and modern technology revitalising ancient knowledge. Heritage connects the most important distance—from memory to people.
