Renewed brilliance and continued support

It is customary for exhibitions and festivals to commence in full bloom, only to experience a decline in activity as the final date approaches, as though the passage of time diminishes some of the initial fervour. However, the Abu Dhabi International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition (ADIHEX) 2026 is charting a different course; each passing day not only sustains its momentum but also adds a new dimension. With only two days remaining until the exhibition's conclusion and the countdown in full swing, we witness ADIHEX continuing its remarkable ascent toward its peak, with no signs of retreat.

On the seventh day, the exhibition welcomed Their Highnesses the Sheikhs and distinguished dignitaries, marking this occasion as a testament to the ongoing and unwavering support extended by the UAE leadership. This visit also underscores the high level of official attention the exhibition receives.

The high-level attendance highlights the event's significance, showcasing a leadership vision that prioritises heritage and emphasises national culture. This passion reflects the exhibition's importance to the UAE as a national event where memory and ambition converge.

At the exhibition grounds, the success story continues to unfold: an expanding audience, returning families, and various sectors proudly presenting their latest offerings, all contributing to experiences that provide new reasons to visit each day. Between the pavilions, the rhythms of folk arts resonate, embodying the passion of the “Wana” and the yearning of the “Ya Mal.” Meanwhile, performances, competitions, and gatherings create a vibrant atmosphere that intertwines experience with wonder, commerce with culture, and a deep appreciation for knowledge.

The exhibition's energy reinvents its narrative daily, showcasing a confident Emirati identity. From falconry and equestrianism to modern innovations and sustainability, it reflects a rich heritage that speaks to generations in their own language while maintaining its authentic voice.

The 23rd edition, the largest in the exhibition's history, remains unique and dynamic; each day is different, with surprises increasing and expectations soaring as it approaches its conclusion. At ADIHEX, the lights don't dim; they shine brighter each day, making the conclusion feel as joyful as the beginning and illuminating the path to future success.

Strong GCC presence and products

That transcend borders

The involvement of Gulf companies in the Abu Dhabi International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition (ADIHEX) underscores the robust cooperation and interconnectedness among the markets of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries. It also highlights Gulf companies' enthusiasm to leverage the exhibition's prestigious reputation.

More than just a celebration of Gulf heritage, the event provides extensive opportunities for companies to finalise deals, forge new partnerships, and engage with a diverse audience. Additionally, the exhibition allows Gulf companies to showcase their products and strengthen their presence in local markets. This participation further enhances the exhibition's significance as a regional platform for promoting Gulf products and expertise in hunting, equestrianism, outdoor activities, heritage, and more.

Mabil

The Saudi company AL-Uqailat Trading is participating in ADIHEX where it is showcasing its products under the Mabil brand. This participation marks the company's sixth appearance, following five previous editions in which it presented an array of products aligned with the exhibition's theme. The company's booth is drawing considerable attention, particularly for its down jackets, which have become highly popular. These cold-resistant jackets are designed to withstand temperatures as low as -10 degrees Celsius.

Nimer Salman, the company's Sales Operations Manager, highlighted the exhibition as a key marketing opportunity. He noted that their products, especially in the UAE market, are attracting significant interest. "Emiratis have refined tastes, so we offer high-quality products in preferred colours. Our exclusive down jacket is designed for temperatures as low as -10 degrees Celsius," he stated. Nimer also announced that the company will attend the upcoming Al Ain International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition, where it will unveil a surprise for UAE customers.

Crocco Crown

Crocco Crown, a Qatari company, specialises in exclusive products crafted from crocodile leather. Attendees at the company's booth immediately recognise the high demand for its offerings, including shoes, bags, wallets, hangers, and various accessories. This marks the company's inaugural participation in ADIHEX, where it is showcasing its unique products, particularly as it currently lacks branches in the country. The crocodile leather used in their products is sourced from Singapore and

Qasr Al Diwaniyah

Qasr Al Diwaniyah, an Omani company specialising in traditional sweets and frankincense, is showcasing a variety of its offerings, including halva and date sweets, as well as Omani frankincense, perfumes, and incense, at its booth at ADIHEX. Headquartered in Dubai, the company is participating in the exhibition for the fourth consecutive year.

Hamad Al Balushi from the company's marketing department emphasised that the company places a strong focus on Omani frankincense. "We specialise in Omani frankincense but offer various products, including sweets and perfumes. The UAE market is strong, and this exhibition provides an excellent platform to showcase our high-quality offerings, expand our reach, and attract new customers. The organization is impressive, the turnout is great, and we're very satisfied with our experience."

Kuwaiti Visual Art

Kuwaiti artist Rabia Al Murad stands out among her peers for her unique use of the subconscious mind technique in her paintings. She explains: "This technique is not commonly found around the world. The painting emerges as I envision it. For instance, when I imagine a gazelle, I close my eyes, use the brush, and let it flow across the canvas until it captures my vision. While viewers may see something different at first, a closer look reveals the true form of my intention. This talent is not something everyone possesses." Al-Murad also shares her background, noting that she is an engineer with a degree in energy from Kuwait. She previously worked at the Houbara Breeding Center in Kuwait in collaboration with the International Houbara Fund in the UAE.

Reflecting on her childhood aspirations, she remarked, "I have always loved drawing and wished to emulate Da Vinci." She praised her recent participation in an exhibition, describing it as a very positive experience, and expressed her happiness regarding the acclaim her paintings received.

processed at the company's own factory. Additionally, Crocco Crown also features items made from ostrich leather, which is imported from South Africa.

Khaled Al Khayarin, the company's owner, emphasised that their products are crafted from pure, natural leather, including bags, gun cases, shoes, and accessories. The company's goal is to offer internationally-standard products at reasonable prices, successfully competing with established brands in the Gulf region despite being less than three years old. Customers can also request specific designs and colors, and the company will accommodate their wishes.

Public Enthusiasm, The Secret Behind ADIHEX's Continuity

The public's initial engagement in the Abu Dhabi International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition has paved the way for larger and more frequent participation in future editions. This sentiment was echoed by numerous exhibitors at the 23rd edition of ADIHEX, currently being held at the ADNEC Centre Abu Dhabi exhibition until September 6. Organised by the ADNEC Group, a subsidiary of Mondon company, in strategic partnership with the Emirates Falconers' Club, the event provides an excellent platform for exhibitors to promote their products and connect directly with an eager public.

Participation and Expansion

Amir Shafiq, General Manager of Al Shaali Moto Group, said: "This marks our 7th consecutive participation in ADIHEX. We have two pavilions—one dedicated to cars and the other to motorcycles. Our involvement is driven by the significance of this exhibition, as it caters to all segments of society and various age groups."

He added: "The exhibition is comprehensive, focusing on heritage, camping gear, and car modifications. Our participation has grown from 70 square meters at our first participation to over 460 square meters across two pavilions today. Next year, we plan to introduce a new brand and occupy three pavilions, potentially reaching 1,000 square meters."

Shafiq highlighted the company's success at the exhibition, showcasing exclusive offers like 10-year unlimited mileage warranties and 5 years of free maintenance for cars. Motorcycle promotions featured free registration and insurance, with discounts up to AED15,000. He expressed that this success motivates them to participate in future events.

Exclusive Offers for the Exhibition

Amin Al Bijawi, the Executive Director of Sales and Marketing at Bin Hamoodah Auto, shared that this year's ADIHEX marks their 6th participation in the exhibition. He said: "Being part of this exhibition has become a staple in our annual calendar. It is one of the most prominent events in the local market and leads to significant sales." He further noted: "We're excited to showcase new models, especially our off-road vehicles like the Shaheen and Shaheen Extreme. We also introduced the BH Edition, designed for young Emiratis with safety features, already approved by the traffic department."

Al Bijawi announced special exhibition deals, including a AED 5,000 discount on select cars and the debut of a hybrid model with a 1,000-kilometer range. Additionally, there's a 20% discount on maintenance contracts, along with other promotions. He noted that the company secures this large space annually and occasionally sponsors the exhibition. Ibrahim Al Dhaheeri from Formula Tires Trading Company shared that this marks their 8th year participating in ADIHEX, and they consistently expand their display area each time. He noted that their dedication to both participation and growth is driven by the desire to showcase new products and attract new customers through a variety of promotions and price reductions.

A Diverse Presence

For the second time, D1 Milano, an Italian watch brand represented by an Emirati agent in the UAE and the Middle East, is taking part in the event. Building on their initial participation, which featured a watch adorned with a Gyrfalcon design by artist Alaa El-Din Abdeen, this year they are presenting a watch that beautifully portrays the horse of Rabdan, a tribute to the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, may God have mercy on him. Artist Mariam Al Hosani hand-painted 100 of these unique timepieces, ensuring that no two are alike, each with its own distinct details. The decision to return to this edition is due to the high demand for their unique watches. After their first participation, they felt it was important to be present at every exhibition, leading to an expansion from one booth to two, with future growth planned.

Ritaj Al Oud returns for the third time after a strong response to its previous participation. This year, its booth has expanded to 13 x 5 meters. Ritaj was the first to hold auctions for oud and oud oil. The public auction at their booth features bids on natural ambergris, rare oud types, and other luxurious items.

Artist Aisha Al Ameri is participating for the third time at the "Aisha Art Gallery" corner, showcasing her artworks that capture Emirati heritage. Her continued involvement is driven by the audience's positive feedback and support.

Environment Agency – Abu Dhabi

Active Presence in Promoting Heritage

The Environment Agency – Abu Dhabi (EAD) is participating as the strategic partner in the Abu Dhabi International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition (ADIHEX). This involvement underscores EAD's dedication to preserving the environment and natural resources, as well as honouring the values of Emirati heritage. Furthermore, it aligns with the UAE's vision of achieving a harmonious balance between protecting nature and promoting cultural heritage associated with hunting, equestrianism, and wildlife.

EAD's involvement in one of the region's premier specialised events underscores its commitment to protecting biodiversity and conserving ecosystems in the Emirate of Abu Dhabi. Additionally, it highlights sustainable practices that safeguard natural resources for future generations, reflecting the belief that the environment is a vital component of the Emirate's history, identity, and heritage.

At ADIHEX, EAD highlights its journey since 1996, evolving from a small group of environmental scientists in harsh desert conditions to a leading environmental organisation. This growth is backed by comprehensive legislation, programs, initiatives, and scientific research.

The Authority upholds the environmental legacy left by the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, may God have mercy on him, who emphasised the importance of safeguarding the environment and wildlife. He pioneered an approach centred on preserving natural resources as a national treasure and a fundamental right for future generations. EAD carries forward this vision through various programs and projects dedicated to protecting native species, conserving their natural habitats, and fostering environmental awareness.

The Authority highlighted the establishment of the Zayed Network of Protected Areas, which is crucial for biodiversity conservation in the Emirate. It also noted its scientific contributions, including the registration of 100 previously unknown invertebrate species, emphasising the role of research in understanding local biodiversity.

The Authority highlighted its role in regulating natural resource activities, particularly fishing, to promote sustainable practices tied to Emirati heritage. Notably, Abu Dhabi has taken the lead regionally by banning traditional fish traps ("Gargoor") to protect fish stocks and ensure the sustainability of marine resources.

The Authority's participation in the exhibition highlights the importance of integrating heritage, environment, and sustainability, particularly through falconry, equestrianism, and wildlife connections that are crucial to Emirati heritage. The Environment Agency – Abu Dhabi aims to promote sustainable heritage by preserving traditional practices while protecting species and habitats that are integral to Emirati society.

EAD's initiatives include environmental legislation, monitoring and enforcement, awareness campaigns, and scientific research. The agency conducts thousands of inspections each year to ensure regulatory compliance, assess environmental risks, and develop frameworks for effective responses, thereby enhancing environmental protection and raising awareness of the emirate's natural resource challenges.

EAD provides scientific advice and information to decision-makers, facilitating the development and implementation of environmental policies grounded in clear scientific principles. This support enhances the emirate's capacity to tackle current and future environmental challenges.

EAD's participation in ADIHEX highlights the integral connection between environmental protection and heritage. It reinforces the idea that nature conservation is not only a preservation of the past but also a crucial investment in the future.

EAD's active presence at the exhibition highlights its commitment to protecting Abu Dhabi's natural resources. The agency seeks to raise awareness of sustainable resource use, reinforcing the emirate's role in balancing environmental preservation, heritage, and quality of life for a sustainable future.

Al Dhafra Shooting Club

Introduces youth to electronic shooting experience

Electronic shooting is drawing considerable attention from visitors at the Abu Dhabi International Hunting and Equestrian Exhibition (ADIHEX) 2026, offering an interactive experience that enables the public, particularly young people, to learn the fundamentals of shooting in a safe environment, while simulating elements of a real shooting experience. This initiative is part of Al Dhafra Shooting Club's participation in the exhibition.

Coach Yahya Al Wadyan, a shooting instructor at Al Dhafra Shooting Club, highlighted that the club's involvement in the exhibition aims to familiarise the public with shooting and provide an engaging experience for attendees. He emphasised that the club features various shooting ranges and specialises in different disciplines, including firearms, Olympic weapons, and archery.

Al Wadyan noted that the club features a diverse collection of weapons for various shooting disciplines, including rifles, pistols, and training models, alongside heritage-themed firearms. He highlighted that this variety allows newcomers to learn essential skills through approved training. The club's main attraction for exhibition visitors is the electronic shooting experience, which offers an interactive simulation of real shooting rules and principles in a completely safe environment. He noted a large turnout of young people interested in learning shooting skills in a safe environment.

Electronic shooting mirrors real shooting principles, focusing on aiming, trigger adjustment, proper handling, and grip. The weapon used resembles an M16 rifle, with aiming done at an electronic screen, creating an interactive experience without live ammunition.

Al Dhafra Shooting Club's participation in ADIHEX helps introduce the sport to the public and encourages youth engagement in a safe and entertaining atmosphere.
